Dear Lilin,

I am writing this apology letter to express my deep remorse and reflection. I know I have done wrong and made you upset, uncomfortable, and anxious. I admit my behavior was inappropriate and offensive, but I assure you that it was a misunderstanding, and I will not let it happen again.

First of all, I apologize for traveling with a female friend. I understand that it made you feel uneasy, and I deeply empathize with your feelings. I assure you that I did not mean to hurt your emotions. From your perspective, if I traveled with a male friend, you would not feel worried or anxious. I realize that this behavior was disrespectful to you, and I will be more careful in the future.

Secondly, I acknowledge that I did not listen to your thoughts and feelings carefully enough. I did not prioritize your emotions or take action promptly to alleviate your doubts and anxieties. I feel ashamed and guilty, and I should have cared more about your feelings and understood your emotions better. This is an area I must work on and improve.

I understand that communication is essential in a relationship, and I did not do well in this aspect. I should have listened to your opinions and thoughts more and not made decisions unilaterally. I admit my mistakes, and I promise to listen to your needs and opinions more carefully in the future and communicate better in our relationship. I will do my best to make our relationship more stable and healthy.

Moreover, I want to thank you for your support and patience. I know my behavior has caused you unnecessary stress and trouble, but you still chose to be with me and helped me become a better person. I am deeply grateful and promise to repay your trust and love with practical actions.

Finally, I want to assure you that I will take your suggestions and opinions seriously, and pay closer attention to your needs and emotions. I love you deeply and cherish our relationship, and I am willing to spend more time and effort to establish our trust and communication. I believe that only through mutual understanding and support can we move towards a better future together.

Sincerely,

Bao Yuchen
